What INLF shows

- The catalyst was earnings, two trading days earlier. INLF posted first-half results after the close on Thu 9/24 (EPS $10.01 vs a loss; sales $12.9M vs $10.3M). It jumped 93% after hours and gapped +72% on Fri 9/25 (premarket high $7.04 on 29.9M premarket shares — before that it traded only 10–40k shares a day).
- 9/25 (the news day) faded all day: open $6.26 → close $5.08 (–18.8%). The bot had it at #1 on the 9:28 list and checked it 1,796 times — every check was "below VWAP", which was correct (a fading gap).
- 9/28 (day 2) was a bounce from below $5: it gapped down to $4.31, bottomed at $3.90 (11:30), and closed at $5.23 (+21% open to close), with the high in the last minute.
- Most of today's move was outside the bot's price range. The bot only trades $5–15, so INLF was not eligible while it climbed from $3.90 to $5. It joined the list at 14:10 (#4), once it was back above $5.

5. Then the spread blocked it: 311 of 491 checks were rejected for spread (median 2.3%, up to 3.7%); another 159 for low volume pace. With a 2.3% spread, a market order gives up about 1.2% just getting in — the spread rule was protecting the account.
6. Takeaway: INLF is a "day-2 after big news" reversal in a thin, sub-$5 stock. Catching it would need a different price range, limit orders instead of market orders, and a reversal setup — all three are test items, not something the current bot should do.
